This production of The Grand Duke is dedicated to the memory of long-time company member

Peter Erickson

Director's Note

The Grand Duke was the fourteenth and final collaboration between the Savoy masters, W. S. Gilbert and composer Arthur Sullivan. (Of note, the opening night for The Grand Duke in 1896 was March 7 – exactly 118 years to the day for our opening night). While the operetta received good notices, it was the duo's only financial failure.

The original production had (mostly) glorious music, and much of the score was used to great effect in Mike Leigh's film Topsy Turvy, a must-see for G&S fans in particular, but a great movie by any measure. The libretto, though, was labored and the show itself clocked in at well over 3 hours. The Times said of the plot, "...the turning-point of (the) plot requires considerable intellectual application before it can be thoroughly grasped." While one might level this criticism to any one of Gilbert's plots, The Grand Duke storyline was particularly oblique and serpentine.

So, the GSVLOC made extensive revisions when they first mounted the production in 1991 – where I was fortunate enough to play Ludwig. The company tightened up the libretto even more in the 2003 production and added a trio from Utopia, Ltd. ("With wily brain") to remind the audience that "legally dead" Ernest and Rudolf still exist.

I mention all of this because I am not a particular fan of tinkering with libretti that have proven successful. The original version of The Grand Duke, however, needed doctoring.

For this production, I have moved the Grand Duchy, of 1750, to the mythical region of Ruritania in 1910. By setting the action in 1910, the rather generic theatrical troupe can be a light opera company that focuses on the works of G&S. Sound familiar?

As is a tradition with most G&S works, we have excised some of the "inside" jokes from 1896 and inserted ones appropriate for either 1910 or 2014. We exercised restraint ... we think.

I would like to thank Holly Windle and Lesley Hendrickson for being gracious and clever contributors to this third round of rewrites. Listen closely to Act 2's "At the outset I may mention," to hear some of their finest work. Lori Maxwell, too, has been a game partner in this adventure. To each of my requests for extra fermatas, added vamps, additional scoring she always answers, "You bet! We can do that!"

I would particularly like to single out special gratitude for Stephen Hage, our producer, for so patiently and helpfully responding to hundreds (literally) of emails from me over the last six months. He was my "sounding board" for each one of the countless changes I made. He offered expert opinion, on-going support and a lot of room for me to play, for which I'm very grateful. I hope you all enjoy this latest GSVLOC version of the final Savoy opera, The Grand Duke.

SYNOPSIS

Act I: A light opera company in the Grand Duchy of Pfennig Halbpfennig is celebrating the upcoming wedding of Ludwig and Lisa, two of their members. The company is also plotting to overthrow the Grand Duke (Rudolph) and place their manager, Ernest, on the throne. (The conspirators' secret sign is the eating of a sausage roll.) As the court positions are to be filled according to standing in the company, leading lady Julia Jellicoe would be the Grand Duchess.

After Ludwig carelessly discloses their plot to the Grand Duke's detective, the Notary proposes a "Statutory Duel" in order to avert disaster. Ludwig and Ernest are to "duel" with cards, the loser becoming legally dead (only until the law expires the next day). The winner will denounce the loser as the plot's instigator and receive a pardon. After Ernest loses, Ludwig goes to find the Grand Duke.

Grand Duke Rudolph, meanwhile, busy planning his wedding to the Baroness von Krakenfeldt, has just learned about the plot against him. Ludwig decides on a new strategy to take advantage of Rudolph's panic. He offers to relieve Rudolph of the danger by winning a rigged "statutory duel" and taking his place during the coup. They summon the people to see their duel, and Rudolph leaves thinking to return when the law expires the next day. Ludwig, however, revives the law for another century!

Julia points out that she is now forced to wed Ludwig in order to take on her leading role as Grand Duchess. Lisa, Ludwig's fiancée, leaves in tears as the new Grand Duke's entourage prepare to don their Patience costumes as suitable court attire.

Act II: When the Baroness arrives for her wedding with Grand Duke Rudolph, she is momentarily dismayed to learn of Rudolph's "death." She explains that Ludwig has to take on all of the Grand Duke's obligations and marry her.

The complex plot takes yet another turn when the Princess of Monte Carlo shows up with her father and a band of hired "nobles." It seems she was betrothed in infancy to the Grand Duke Rudolph, and her father has finally obtained money enough to pay off his debts and bring her here just before the betrothal arrangement expires at 3:00. (His money came from roulette.) The claim of the Princess supersedes that of the Baroness, and she is about to marry the bewildered Ludwig when the real Grand Duke appears (with Ernest and the Notary) with some news which quickly resolves the tangled relationships.

GLOSSARY (in order of occurrence)

$\underline{Act I}$ :

Pfennig Halbpfennig - Literally, penny half-penny. Tuppenny ha'penny is British slang for anything inferior and trivial.

Comedian/Comédienne - terms used to refer to actors (not necessarily comic ones)

Soubrette - an actress who plays the young and saucy roles.

quite a dashing sposo - Italian for male spouse

But it's bilious on the whole - upsetting to the liver

D will attempt to "square the press" - bribe a reviewer

F claims all hoydens - roles of spirited, tomboyish girls

like turtle her first love confessing - turtle-dove

what folly fell - what dreadful folly

castle gibbet - gallows

may not fight with falchions bright - sword, esp. a broad curved one orthography foregoes her spells - a pun about bending the rules of spelling ipso facto - Latin for "by the very act" (that is automatically)

King's evidence - evidence provided by an accused person about his alleged partners in crime (like State's evidence)

compromising bonhomie - French word for geniality

as o'er our penny roll we sing - a cheap type of bread rich mock turtle, thick and clear - namely a soup (also cheap)

two-shilling gloves - even these are expensive by the Duke and Baroness's standards

give this man his gruel - make him take his punishment

this plebian man of shoddy - "plebian" means "of the masses" and "shoddy" is a kind of inferior woolen cloth

when two doughty heroes thunder - valiant verbum sat. - more legal language from the Notary; this is an abbreviation for a Latin phrase meaning a word to the wise is sufficient (verbum sat sapienti)

I'm not an ascetic - one who denies himself the creature comforts

the jolly jinks - merry-making (as in "high jinks")

as merry as a grig - A phrase that may mean "as merry as a cricket" (and just how merry is that?).

Act II:

Eloia! and Opoponax! - Fake Greek-sounding exclamations. Opoponax from the Greek for "all-healing", was a medicinal plant, and in Gilbert's day, trade name of a line of perfumes hoity-toity vixenish viragoes - snooty, ill-tempered, overbearing women ingenue - the role of sweet, naive young thing

hard as the millstone nether - The nether millstone is the lower of the two millstones used to grind flour (it's quite hard).

lily-white laughing leman - paramour

as sulky as a super - (actor lingo) short for "supernumerary" an actor with a non-speaking part who, if not in something as jolly as G&S, might get surly

"tol the riddle lol" - nonsense words

technical bogie - a frightening apparition, although in this case only legally, not literally magnum of merry champagne - a double-sized bottle

Pommery '74 - the 1874 vintage of the fine French champagne

Come, bumpers, aye ever so many - glasses filled to the brim

a pretty job-lot of second-hand nobles - a group of diverse articles bought as a unit, often of inferior quality rook the pigeon and the gull - a bird pun about taking advantage of suckers

Allons, encore, garçons, fillettes, vos louis d'or, etc. – a lure to play roulette: Come now, again, boys and girls, your 20-frank gold coins, etc.

the law forbids the banns - announcement of a proposed marriage
